Index for Volume 15 Fall 1987 Through Summer 1988

Activating Public Administration Students in a Statistics Course: A Team-Teaching Approach. Ronald John Hy and Linda Hughes. Winter 60–64.

The Authority of Publius: A Reading of the Federalist Papers, by Albert Furtwangler. Reviewed by Edward J. Erler. Spring 122–124.

Canada: The Neglected Focus. Gerald F. Rutan. Summer 154–60.

Commitments and Conundrums: The American Experience with Alliances. Alan Ned Sabrasky. Fall 24–30.

The Criminal Flite: Professional and Organized Crime, by Howard Abadinsky. Reviewed by Susette Talarico. Winter 82–84.

Data Problems on the Setups Monograph, The Supreme Court in American Politics. Thomas R. Hensley and Karen Dean. Winter 57–59.

Federal Budgetmaking: A Simulation Exercise. Richard G. Higgins, Jr. Spring 104–107.

The Foundations of Conservative Thought: An Anglo-American Tradition in Perspective, by William R. Harbour. Reviewed by John H. Hallowell. Winter 85.

Freedom of Religion in America: Historical Roots, Philosophical Concepts and Contemporary Problems, by Henry B. Clark. Reviewed by Ernest Evans. Winter 85.

The Hidden-Hand Presidency: Eisenhower As Leader, by Fred Greenstein. Reviewed by Henry P. Kenski. Winter 81–82.

Images of International Law: What Do Students Learn from International Relations Textbooks? James Larry Taulbee. Winter 74–79.

Introduction to Teaching Comparative Politics. Daniel J. O'Neil. Summer 132.

Low Intensity Conflict: Global Challenges. James Berry Motley. Fall 15–23.

Notes on Political Philosophy and Contemporary International Relations. Daniel Mahoney. Fall 4–9.

The Phenomenological Persuasion in Political Science: To the Students Themselves. Lawrence R. Godtfredsen. Winter 65–73.

The Political Theory of the Federalist, by David F. Epstein. Reviewed by Edward J. Erler. Spring 122–124.

Politics and Christianity: Limitations and Opportunities. Daniel J. O'Neil. Spring 92–97.

Principles of Politics: An Introduction, by John J. Schrems. Reviewed by James V. Schall. Spring 124–126.

Public Administration, Constitutionalism, and Political Philosophy in America. Peter Augustine Lawler. Winter 50–56.

Relevance or Reinforcement: Teaching about the Anti-Feminist Movement. Jilda M. Aliotta and Janet K. Boles. Fall 31–38.

Religion, State and the Burger Court, by Leo Pfeffer. Reviewed by Frederick P. Lewis. Summer 161–162.

The Sexual Politics of Jean-Jacques Rousseau, by Joel Schwartz. Reviewed by Mary P. Nichols. Summer 162–164.

Shakespeare's English History Plays as Political Science Pedagogy. Jules Gleicher. Spring 98–103.

Teaching about Contemporary Communist Systems. Bradley Scharf. Summer 147–153.

Teaching Industrial Democracies: Balancing Theory and Information for Undergraduates. Lawrence C. Mayer. Summer 140–146.

Teaching Political Development in the 1990s: Its Perils and Possibilities. Stephen P. Mumme. Summer 133–138.

Thucydides, by W. Robert Connor. Reviewed by Larry Arnhart. Summer 164–165.

Thucydides' "History" as Political History. Michael Palmer. Summer 108–114.

Toward an Intellectual History of Development: Notes on Contemporary Research. James P. O'Leary. Fall 10–14.

The Tragedy of Political Science: Politics, Scholarship, and Democracy, by David M. Ricci. Reviewed by James V. Schall. Spring 124–126.

Using Fiction to Expose a Fundamental Theme in American Public Administration. David E. Marion. Winter 44–49.

Voting, Political Obligation, and Political Education. Glenn H. Utter. Spring 115–121.

Index for Volume 15 Fall 1987 Through Summer 1988

Activating Public Administration Students in a Statistics Course: A Team-Teaching Approach. Ronald John Hy and Linda Hughes. Winter 60–64.

The Authority of Publius: A Reading of the Federalist Papers, by Albert Furtwangler. Reviewed by Edward J. Erler. Spring 122–124.

Canada: The Neglected Focus. Gerald F. Rutan. Summer 154–60.

Commitments and Conundrums: The American Experience with Alliances. Alan Ned Sabrasky. Fall 24–30.

The Criminal Flite: Professional and Organized Crime, by Howard Abadinsky. Reviewed by Susette Talarico. Winter 82–84.

Data Problems on the Setups Monograph, The Supreme Court in American Politics. Thomas R. Hensley and Karen Dean. Winter 57–59.

Federal Budgetmaking: A Simulation Exercise. Richard G. Higgins, Jr. Spring 104–107.

The Foundations of Conservative Thought: An Anglo-American Tradition in Perspective, by William R. Harbour. Reviewed by John H. Hallowell. Winter 85.

Freedom of Religion in America: Historical Roots, Philosophical Concepts and Contemporary Problems, by Henry B. Clark. Reviewed by Ernest Evans. Winter 85.

The Hidden-Hand Presidency: Eisenhower As Leader, by Fred Greenstein. Reviewed by Henry P. Kenski. Winter 81–82.

Images of International Law: What Do Students Learn from International Relations Textbooks? James Larry Taulbee. Winter 74–79.

Introduction to Teaching Comparative Politics. Daniel J. O'Neil. Summer 132.

Low Intensity Conflict: Global Challenges. James Berry Motley. Fall 15–23.

Notes on Political Philosophy and Contemporary International Relations. Daniel Mahoney. Fall 4–9.

The Phenomenological Persuasion in Political Science: To the Students Themselves. Lawrence R. Godtfredsen. Winter 65–73.

The Political Theory of the Federalist, by David F. Epstein. Reviewed by Edward J. Erler. Spring 122–124.

Politics and Christianity: Limitations and Opportunities. Daniel J. O'Neil. Spring 92–97.

Principles of Politics: An Introduction, by John J. Schrems. Reviewed by James V. Schall. Spring 124–126.

Public Administration, Constitutionalism, and Political Philosophy in America. Peter Augustine Lawler. Winter 50–56.

Relevance or Reinforcement: Teaching about the Anti-Feminist Movement. Jilda M. Aliotta and Janet K. Boles. Fall 31–38.

Religion, State and the Burger Court, by Leo Pfeffer. Reviewed by Frederick P. Lewis. Summer 161–162.

The Sexual Politics of Jean-Jacques Rousseau, by Joel Schwartz. Reviewed by Mary P. Nichols. Summer 162–164.

Shakespeare's English History Plays as Political Science Pedagogy. Jules Gleicher. Spring 98–103.

Teaching about Contemporary Communist Systems. Bradley Scharf. Summer 147–153.

Teaching Industrial Democracies: Balancing Theory and Information for Undergraduates. Lawrence C. Mayer. Summer 140–146.

Teaching Political Development in the 1990s: Its Perils and Possibilities. Stephen P. Mumme. Summer 133–138.

Thucydides, by W. Robert Connor. Reviewed by Larry Arnhart. Summer 164–165.

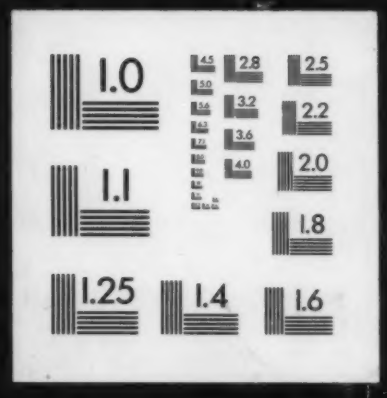
Thucydides' "History" as Political History. Michael Palmer. Summer 108–114.

Toward an Intellectual History of Development: Notes on Contemporary Research. James P. O'Leary. Fall 10–14.

The Tragedy of Political Science: Politics, Scholarship, and Democracy, by David M. Ricci. Reviewed by James V. Schall. Spring 124–126.

Using Fiction to Expose a Fundamental Theme in American Public Administration. David E. Marion. Winter 44–49.

Voting, Political Obligation, and Political Education. Glenn H. Utter. Spring 115–121.



1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
5.6
6.3
7.1
8.0
9.0